Angel & Elf
Christmas Cookies

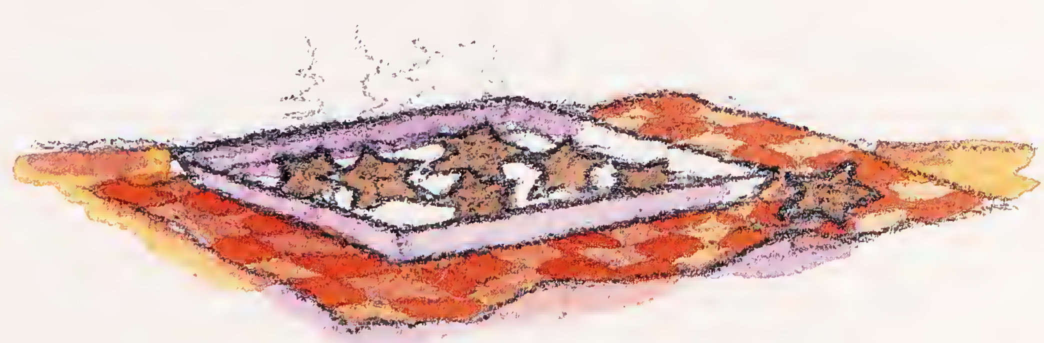

Sam Williams

Angel and Elf were making Christmas cookies. The whole house smelled of cinnamon and nutmeg.

While the cookies baked, Angel and Elf watched the falling snow.
But they forgot to watch the cookies.
They were burned.

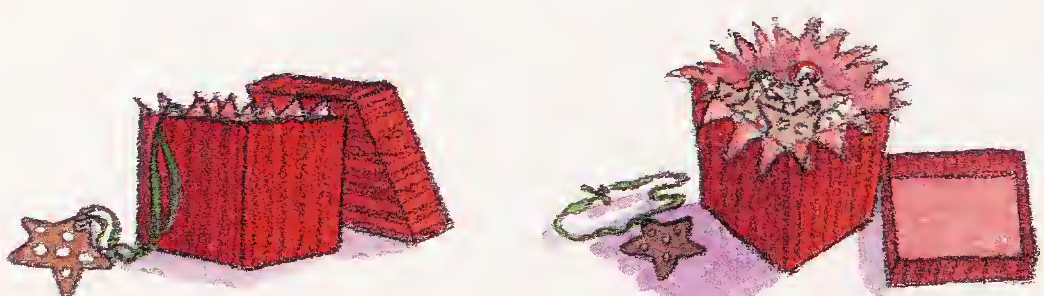

"We can't eat them now," said Elf.
"But we can trim the tree with them!"
said Angel.

Angel tied ribbons
to the cookies.

Elf added frosting and put them in a gift box.

Then they went to visit Christmas Tree. "We brought cookies to hang," said Angel.
Christmas Tree twinkled her lights.

“Yum-m-m! Angel’s Christmas cookies smell delicious,” she said. “Thank you.”

"You look good enough to eat!" said Angel, and they waved good-bye to Christmas Tree.

That night, a huge baby
snowbear came sniffing
at the cookies.

"Baby Bear love cookies," said the baby, shaking the tree. Then he took all the cookies and toddled off into the night.

Just as Christmas Tree realized that the baby had also taken her special Christmas star, Angel and Elf arrived.

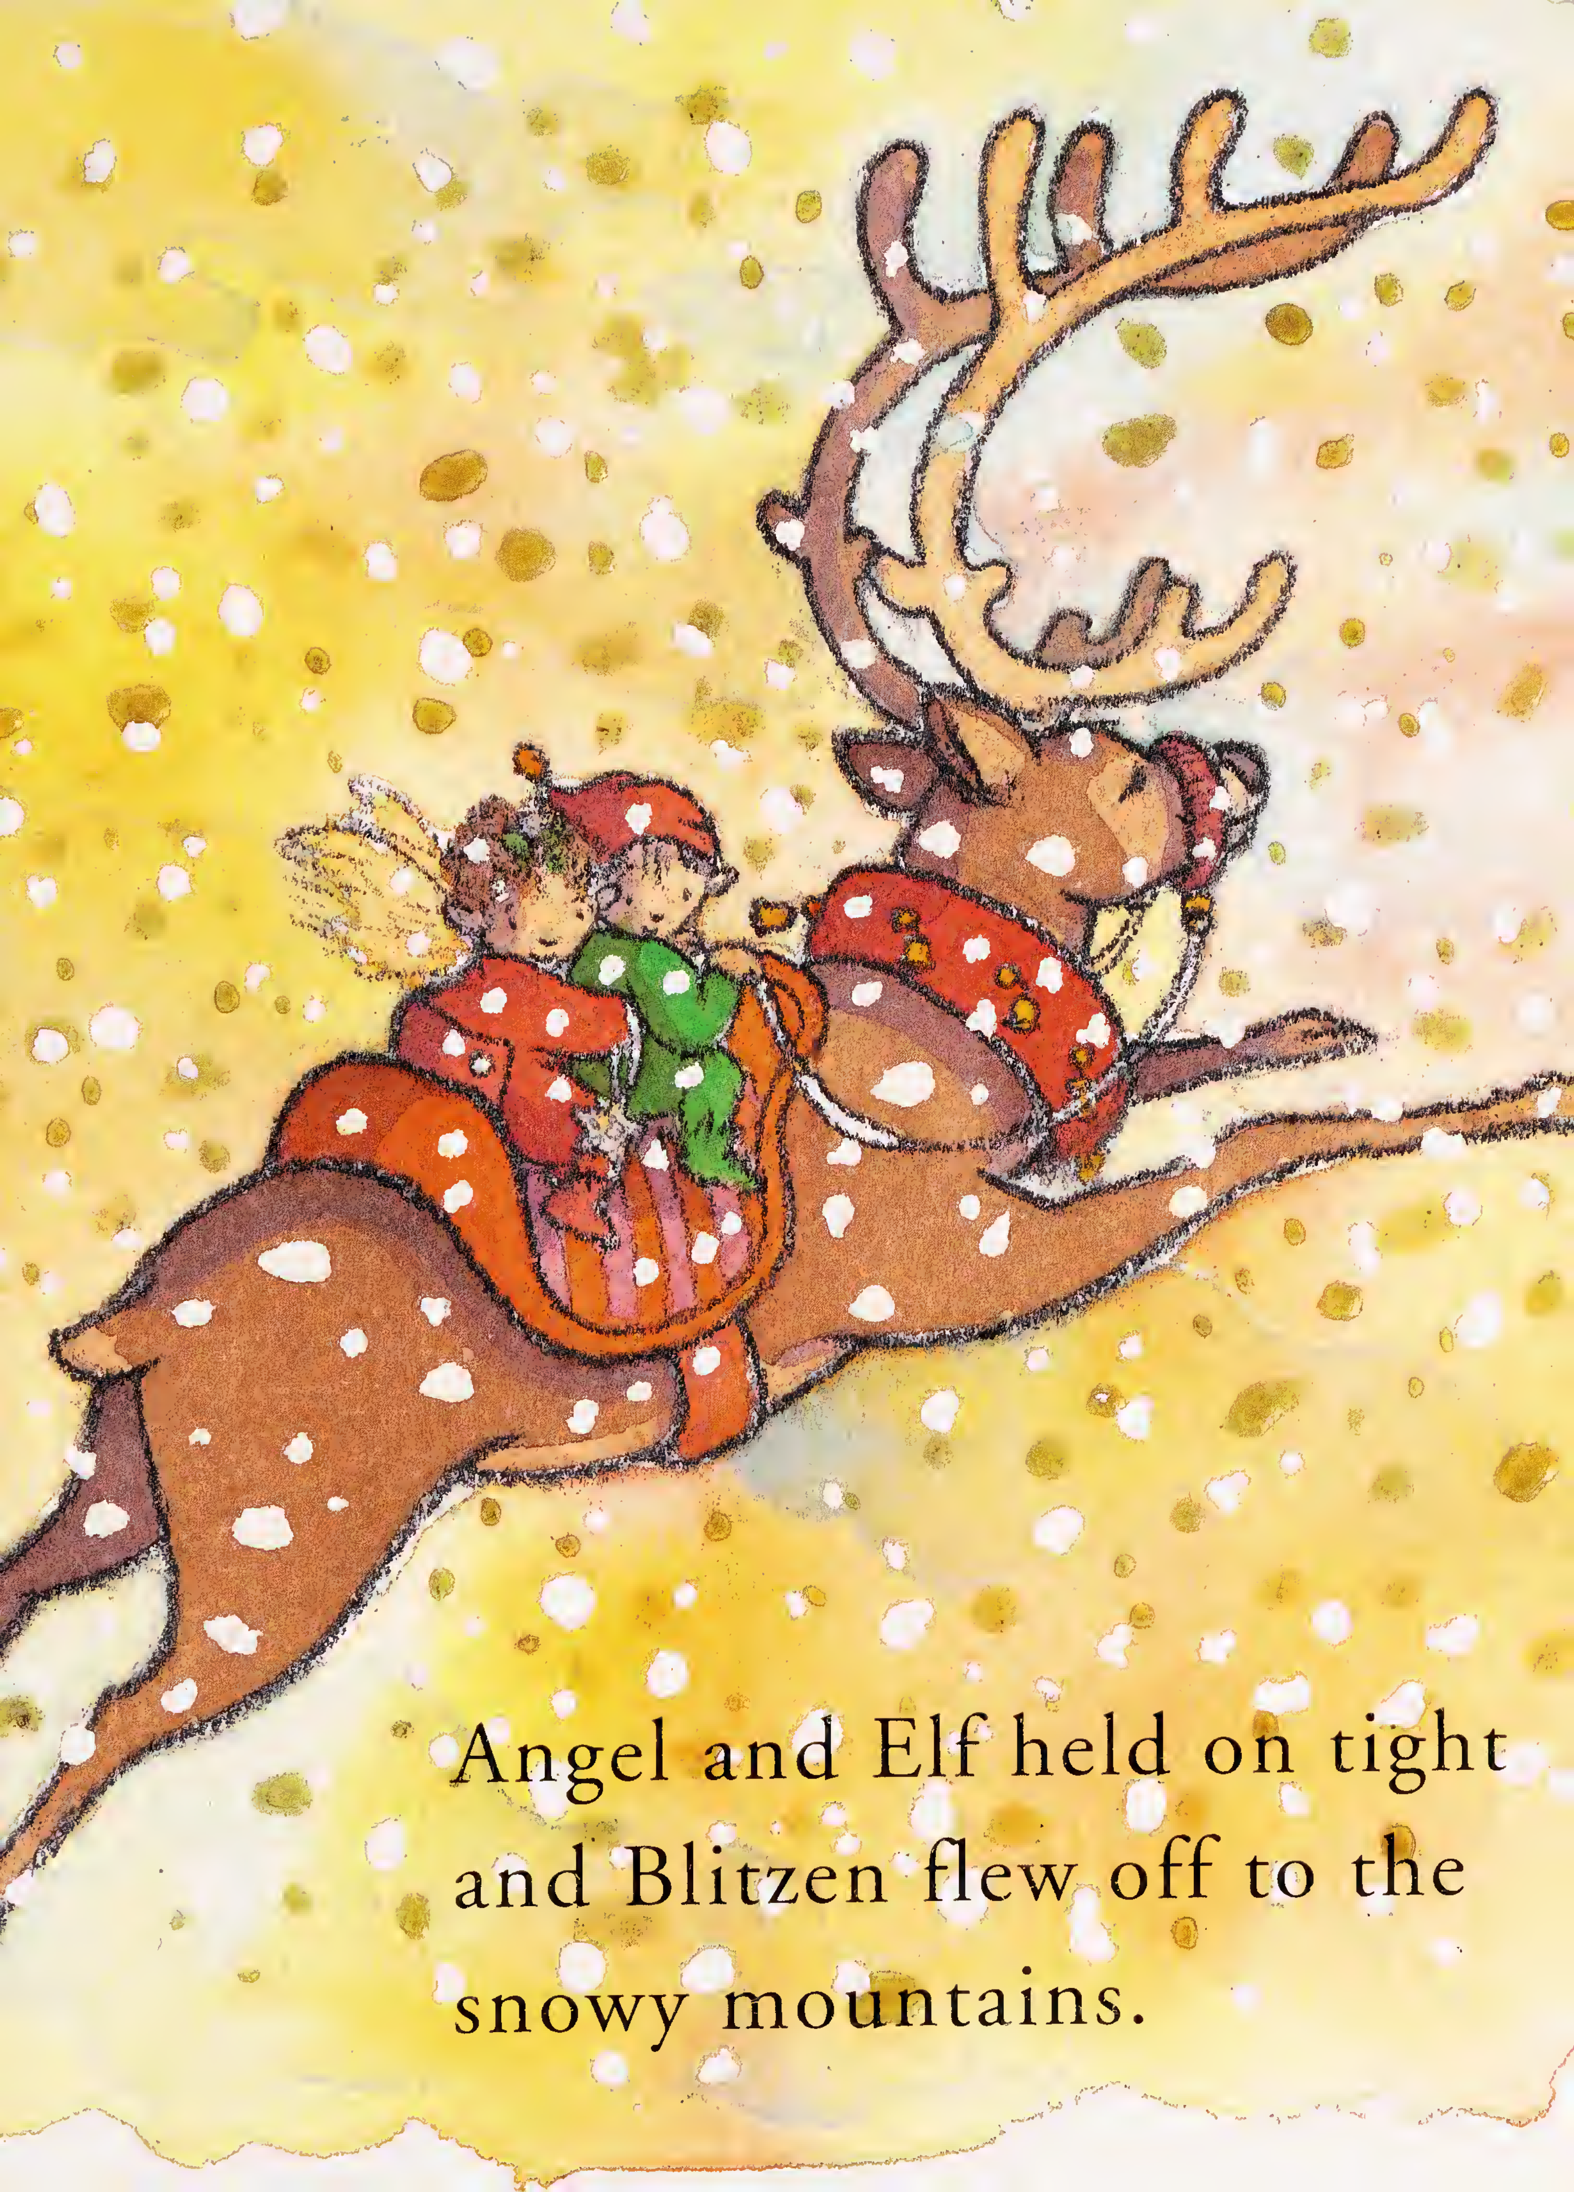

“Don’t worry,” said Angel. “I’m sure we can find that baby snowbear.” And they all had a big hug.

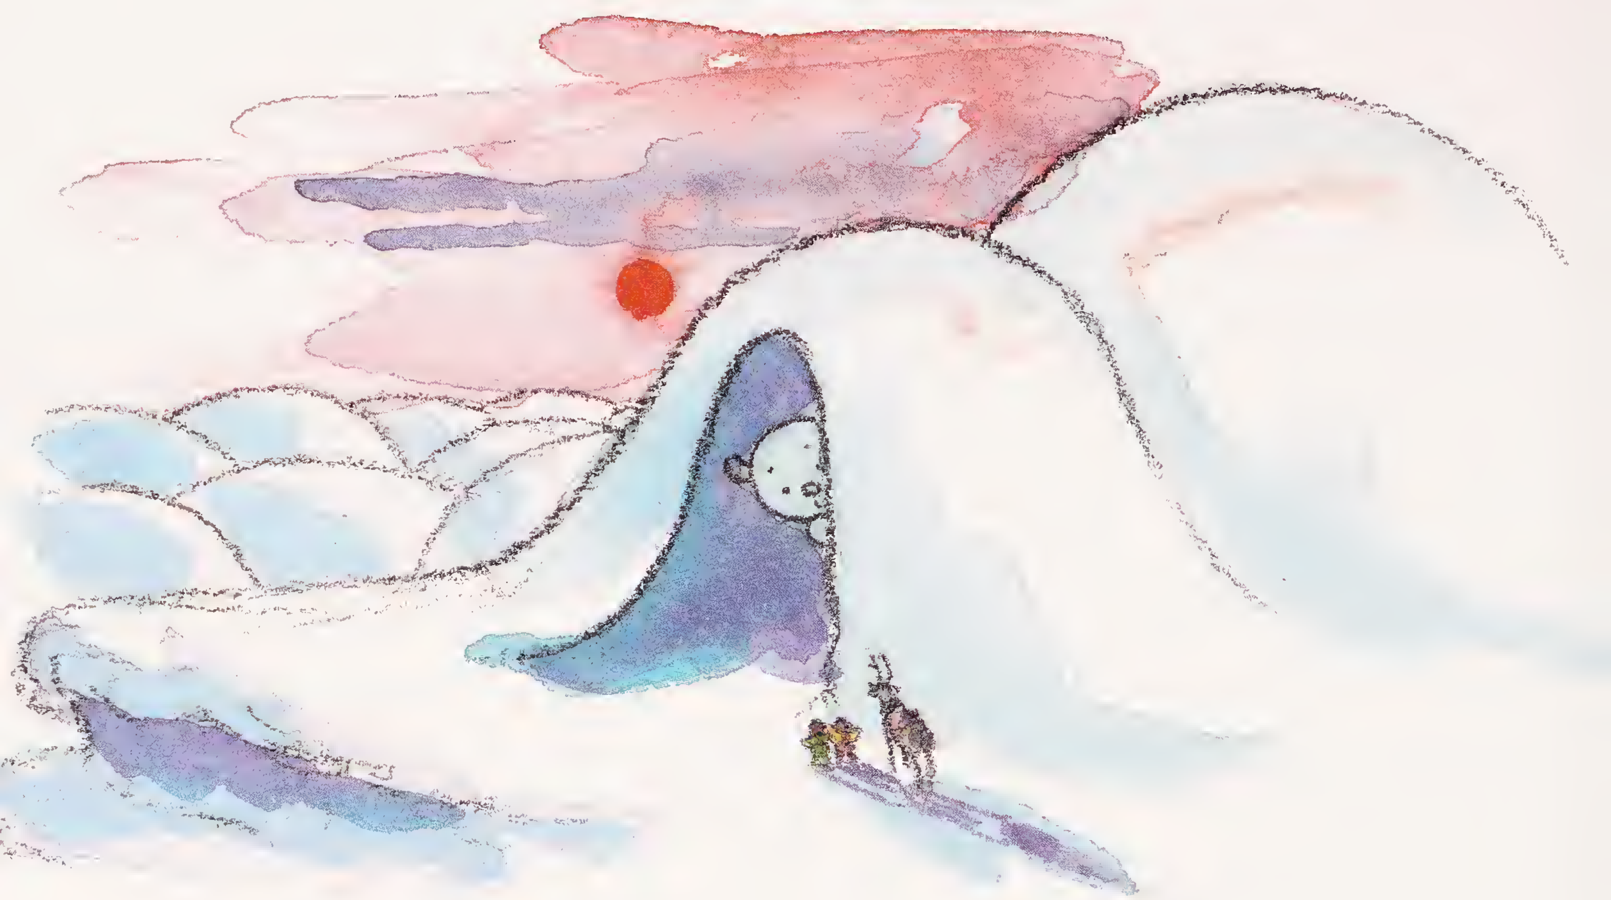

Angel waved her magic wand.
Blitzen, Santa's fastest reindeer, flew over to her.
"May I take this last cookie?"
Angel asked Christmas Tree.
"Of course," she said.

Angel and Elf held on tight and Blitzen flew off to the snowy mountains.

Blitzen landed gently at the snowbears' cave. The huge baby snowbear peeked out.

Angel and Elf had never seen a snowbear before.

"Wow!" said Elf. "If this is the baby,
how big is the mom?"

The ground shivered and shook and Mom appeared. She lifted up Baby Snowbear for a cuddle.

Angel flew up to them. “My name is Angel,” she said, “and my friends are Elf and Blitzen. We think Baby took something from our friend Christmas Tree by mistake.”

Baby Snowbear looked at Mom.
"Baby," said Mom, "do you have something in your paw, sweetheart?"

Baby opened his big, fluffy paw.
And there it was - Christmas Tree's sparkling, bright and beautiful star.

Angel held out that last cookie she had taken from Christmas Tree. But that cookie was far too small for Baby Snowbear.

So, with a wave of her magic wand, Angel made the tiny cookie into a giant, snow-bear size cookie.

It was nearly Christmas Eve.
Angel and Elf had to hurry.
They waved good-bye as they soared through the night sky.

Christmas Tree was pleased to see them return safely. The Christmas Carolers had come to keep her company.

Angel put Christmas Tree's star in place and Christmas Tree thanked them all.

Then everyone sang:

Oh, what a won-der-ful thing to be,
a glor-i-ous,
spark-ling
Christ-mas Tree."

Merry Christmas everyone!

Angel and Elf decorate their friend Christmas Tree with delicious cookies.
But someone else wants the cookies, and the sparkling star atop the tree as well.
Will the two little friends be able to save their Christmas Eve celebration?

Also available: Snowy Magic

First published as a board book in North Ameri
www.boxerbooks.com
Boxer® is a trademark of Boxer Books Limited
 1 3 5 7 9 10 8 6 4 2 Pı
All of our papers are sourced from managed fore